Judge's Comment

Debbie Lauritz, Chris Carpenter, Peter Valeri, Emily Glover: Many good commercial wines, well made, fruit and oak balanced - awarded Bronze medals - just lacked weight, complexity or finesse to go higher. Silver and gold awarded wines showed excellent fruit weight, lovely acid drive and second characters that added interest and layers, but just used in balance with the wine.

Judge's Comment

Debbie Lauritz, Peter Valeri, Brian Freeman, Antonio D'Onise, Will Figueira: Good class with much discussion over the top gold. In the end a more complex style got up. A good strike rate of medals shows that Australian winemakers and viticulturists are mastering this variety better than ever. Non award winners were either too advanced or over-oaked.

Debbie Lauritz, Peter Valeri, Chris Carpenter, Emily Glover: A great class, all generally very well made wines with few faults; namely reduction, obvious RS, unbalanced phenolics. So great to see range of styles from fruity crisp to fuller bodied, some skin contact, lees work, barrel ferment.

The 2020 just pipped the current vintage wines in the end. Some excellent exhibits showing finesse, freshness and poise. Non award winners were either advanced or lacking fruit flavours.

Andrew Duff, Nadja Wallington, Sam Renzaglia, Hugh Spinaze: A captivating bracket of stylistic differentiation. 2020 wines for the most part were smoke effected. Top wines showed winemaking restraint toward sugar and lovely fruit purity.

Russell Cody, Brendan Kaczorowski, Brian Freeman, Will Figueira: Great class to judge. Come on consumers go out and buy these wines and enjoy the superb flavours of this grape variety. Semillon may not be the "in thing" but savvy buyers will buy these and will enjoy these much more than the so-called "new best thing" as Semillon in Australia is a hidden gem.

Andrew Duff, Nadja Wallington, Sam Renzaglia, Hugh Spinaze: A class that every year gets more exciting to judge. Fruit purity was key to the top wines in the class; sulphides, attenuation and RS in balance were detrimental to those wines that didn't perform well.

Russell Cody, Brendan Kaczorowski, Brian Freeman, Will Figuiera, Antonio D'Onise: Solid class with some excellent balanced wines getting top awards. Cabernet has changed over the last five years with winemakers not trying to over-extract resulting in more elegant drinkable wines. Non-award wines were either advanced or too tannic.

Debbie Lauritz, Peter Valeri, Chris Carpenter, Emily Glover: Good class, very high standard of wines. Couple of different styles rewarded. Best wines showed varietal character, tannin ripeness, balanced unobtrusive oak and palate length. Unawarded wines either green / under-ripe, too heavy on oak or fruit dull.

Debbie Lauritz, Peter Valeri, Chris Carpenter, Emily Glover: Few highlights in this class. Better wines showed fruit flesh, fine tannins, brightness. Wines marked down due to herbal, excessive oak and extracted tannins.

Russell Cody, Brian Freeman, Brendan Kaczorowski, Will Figueira: Good class with two diverse styles getting up for the golds. Freshness and vitality were the keys for these wines and the lower medal winner. Non award wines were a tad advanced or were over-oaked.

Russel Cody, Brian Freeman, Brendan Kaczorowski, Will Figueira: An eclectic mix of wines with differing varieties, styles and quality levels. Best wines had fruit amalgamation but still had structure, vitality and poise. GSM blends are certainly making judges heads turn. Major negative was over over-oaking and wines looking too advanced.
